- 780 schools
- 500,000 students
- 120+ charter schools
- Five community college districts
Objectives

- Understand the options you have for becoming a teacher.
- Know the steps to attaining a teaching credential based on your selected option.
Alternative and Traditional Pathways to Teaching

Alternative Pathways - Obtain a teaching position and then complete credential coursework and requirements through:

- Career Technical Education (CTE) teaching positions
- Intern teaching position

Pros:
- Attain your credential and get paid at the same time
- Begin paying into retirement
- Access to benefits

Cons:
- Learn as you go
- No access to federal financial aid

Traditional Pathway - Complete a university teacher preparation program, including student teaching, and then attain a teaching position.

Pros:
- Knowledge, mentoring and support PRIOR to entering classroom
- Access federal financial aid

Cons:
- No $$, retirement, or benefits

I have industry experience but not a degree. How can I become a teacher without going back to school first?

Try a Career Technical Education (CTE) Credential.

1. Apply for a CTE teaching position in your field based on your experience.
2. Upon being offered a teaching position, work with your human resources office to obtain a preliminary CTE credential and an English Learner waiver.
   - When you apply for a preliminary CTE credential, you will also be enrolling in CTE credentialing program at the same time.
3. Complete CTE credential coursework... SDCOE’s program coursework totals 12 weeks, is online, and requires two years of mentoring.
4. Upon completing your credential coursework, you will be recommended for a clear credential.

An intern credential...
...allows you to begin teaching, earning money, and receiving health benefits while going to school to get your credential.

- Single Subject (secondary)
- Multiple Subject (elementary)
- Special Education (all grades)

Take a look at a CTE Credential or an Intern Credential.
I have industry experience and a degree but not a credential.

Same here. I have a degree, but not a teaching credential.

1. Complete intern pre-service coursework through a university or SDCOE
2. Attain an intern eligibility letter from your intern program. This verifies that you have completed CSET/CBEST, attained a certificate of clearance, and completed the pre-service courses.
3. Apply for a teaching position in your subject area based on subject matter competency.
4. Upon hire, enter into a 2-year intern program. Begin teaching as a teacher of record while completing internship
5. Pass TPA and RICA (multiple subjects)
6. Attain preliminary credential
